As CIO, Shawn W. Hill leads the information and technology team at Lowndes, overseeing IT operations across all of the firm's offices. With more than 20 years of experience in the law firm technology field, he is responsible for developing and implementing firmwide information technology and security initiatives that drive growth and deliver superior client service.

Prior to joining Lowndes, Hill served as chief technology officer at the largest Georgia law firm outside Atlanta. As a key member of the firm's administrative team, he implemented both short-term and long-term technology plans to ensure reliable, secure and cost-effective technology solutions. Earlier in his career, Hill also held various IT leadership positions in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Hill earned his graduate degree in management of operations and information technology from Worcester Polytechnic Institute and his undergraduate degree in computer science from Franklin Pierce College.
