

Services & Industries

Trademark Infringement Litigation

A lawsuit for trademark infringement is handled in state or federal court. It can be based on federal or state law. The remedy is typically an injunction to stop the infringement. Resolution of the litigation is typically through a license by the infringer. The firm has handled dozens of trademark infringement lawsuits and our firm attorneys are familiar with local courts and practices.